Central American and South American Recourses for Sailors

Vendors List

This is Sarana's list of vendors for Central & South America. Eric and Sherrell compiled this list in 2008 by personally visiting about 75% of all of these businesses.

We've compiled our own list of some of the hard to find items and some of the basics. Very few businesses on this list speak English, but take your time, use some sign language, and if possible bring a sample part with you and the friendly people will be more than willing to try to understand you.

If you speak Spanish well enough to converse over the phone or via email then you'll find this list a great way to save you from running all over. Of course you can always try English or find someone to help you make phone calls.

If you have questions, a service or company you'd like to add or corrections to make, email me through our website:

Transportation

The buses in Central America come in three classes, Executive, Express, and "Anything that Runs". The following two companies offer bus services that are comfortable for long distance hauls. The executive are often full during the tourist season so reserve your spot at least 3 days ahead of time. If you're lucky you can hop on one in the same day, but often they are full. For the "Anything that Runs" category these can be caught anywhere you see one going by - just wave.

Bus: Trans Nica (Costa Rica, Nicaragua, El Salvador, Honduras) http://www.transnica.com 505-270-3133 / 505-270-3147

Bus: Tica Bus (Mexico & All of Central America)

http://www.ticabus.com 505-222-6094

El Salvador (San Salvador)

The place to go in El Salvador for anything is San Salvador. The basics can be found via short trips from Bahia del Sol and Puesta del Sol, but San Salvador is the place to go for anything serious.

Groceries:

- ◆ Super Selectos good place to find American foods and rare items.

Costa Rica

We found Puntareanas to be a small gold mine of boat supplies. It's also a great place to work on the boat and there are many good restaurants and other cruisers to while away the hours. Of course there are other good vendors too, including some in San Jose which we haven't had the time to search out yet.
